

EMAIL DRAFTS — ready to send

24 Aug 2026 — download snapshot of every finished draft from this week's research. Source of truth lives in `SUPPORT-GROUPS.md` and `NEW-SPACES.md`; this file is the copy you can read on a phone and forward.

Same rules as OUTREACH.md: copy the subject, copy the body, paste into Gmail (or Reddit modmail / Facebook DM where it says so), send, tick the box. Nothing to fill in except where marked []. One or two a week — never more.

Addresses that are not verified say so. The `info@` + web address rule works maybe half the time; if it bounces, use the contact form. Never guess a person's address.

PART 1 — SUPPORT-GROUP SHELF PITCHES

(from SUPPORT-GROUPS.md — the rooms where the audience already gathers)

1. r/stopdrinking mods — the wiki shelf

Where: Reddit modmail → reddit.com/r/stopdrinking → "Message the mods" Subject: A free recovery app for the wiki's resources — one line, no feed post

Hi mods,

I'm not writing to post anything in the sub — I'm asking about a line on the shelf you already keep.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built the app I needed the whole time: Turn Someday Into Day One. Free — a day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a lesson a day, a private journal, and a section for the person who loves someone using, which almost nothing else has. Completely private: nobody sees anyone's data, not even me.

Your wiki keeps a list of related recovery subs and resources, which is exactly the kind of shelf I'd like a line on. If it belongs there, use it. If it doesn't, tell me why — that's genuinely more useful to me than a polite no.

2. r/NoFap mods — the resources shelf

Where: Reddit modmail → reddit.com/r/NoFap → "Message the mods" Subject: A free app for your resources list — no money, nothing in the feed

Hi mods,

One question, and I'll keep it to a paragraph: does a free app belong on your resources list?

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built the app I needed the whole time. It has a full track for quitting porn — plus alcohol, gambling, food, social media and more — a day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, and a section for the partner, which almost nothing else has. Free, private, no account needed to start.

I'm not asking for a post, a sticky, or anything in the feed. If a line in your resources belongs to it, take it; if not, I'd rather hear why than a polite no.

3. In The Rooms — resource directory

Send to: [info@intherooms.com – confirm on intherooms.com; if it bounces use the contact form]
Subject: A free recovery app for the hours between meetings

Hi team,

You run 130+ live online meetings a week for 600,000+ members. This is about the hours between them.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built the app I needed the whole time: Turn Someday Into Day One. Free — a day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a lesson a day, a private journal, and a section for the person who loves someone using, which almost nothing else has. It's not a meeting and not a sponsor and never pretends to be either. It's what someone opens at 3am between meetings.

If it's worth a line in your resource directory, use it. If it isn't, tell me what a member would need that it doesn't do.

4. The Phoenix — partner / resource list

Send to: [info@thephoenix.org – confirm on thephoenix.org] Subject: A free recovery app for Phoenix members — nothing for your team to run

Hi team,

The Phoenix already keeps a partner list (ARHE is on it), so this is a simple ask: is there room for a free tool?

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One — free, private, no card. A day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a lesson a day, and a section for the person who loves someone using. Members can use the whole thing with no account and no name, and there is nothing for your team to administer.

Your events get people out of the house; this covers the night before and the morning after. If it belongs on the shelf, take it. If not, tell me why.

5. SMART Recovery — resources / handouts

Send to: [info@smartrecovery.org – confirm on smartrecovery.org] Subject: A free app that fits the 4-Point Program — for your resources page

Hi team,

SMART is the evidence-based room, so I'll skip the fluff.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One: free, private, no account needed to start. The daily lessons are built from the same practical, no-higher-power-required register as the 4-Point Program — building motivation, coping with urges, managing thoughts, living balanced. It also has a section for the person supporting someone, which almost nothing else has.

If a line about it belongs on your resources page or in a meeting handout, use it. If it doesn't, tell me what's missing.

6. Loosid (and Sober Grid — same letter, name swapped)

Send to: [confirm on loosidapp.com; Sober Grid via their site/contact] Subject: A free app to cross-list with your sober community

Hi team,

You built the community side of sobriety; this is the private side.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One — free, private, no card. Day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, daily lessons across 13 habit tracks, and a section for the partner, which almost nothing else has.

If your app keeps a "recommended resources" or partner list, a line about it fits there. If not, no problem — and if something in the app would help your community more, tell me what and I'll build it.

7. Recovery Dharma · LifeRing · Women for Sobriety — one letter, three names

Send to: [each org's contact page – confirm addresses on the sites] Subject: A free recovery app for your resources page

Hi,

Quick question from someone who lived it: is there room on your resources page for a free app?

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One. Free, private, no account needed. A day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a lesson a day, and a section for the person who loves someone using. It doesn't replace meetings — it lives in the hours between them, and it asks nothing of your organization.

If it's worth a line, take it. If it isn't, tell me why — that's more useful to me than a polite no.

8. Facebook group owner (Sober Sisters · Affected By Addiction — one DM, name swapped)

Where: private message to the group's admin/owner only. One message, no follow-up, never in the group feed.

Hi — I run a free recovery app and I have one question: does it belong on your group's pinned resources post?

I was addicted 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One — free, private, no card. A day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, and a section for the person who loves someone using, which almost nothing else has.

If it fits, I'd be grateful for a line. If it doesn't, no hard feelings — and thank you for running the group. turnsomedayintodayone.com

Order for Part 1: 1, 3, 4, 5 first (the biggest shelves), then 2, 6, 7, 8.

PART 2 — FAITH NETWORKS + UNIVERSITY

(from NEW-SPACES.md, emails 7–13 — the church recovery map and the college staff side)

9. Overcomers Outreach — the bridge network

Send to: confirm on overcomersoutreach.org — contact form, or the [info@ rule; a national office, expect slow] Subject: Free recovery app for the six days between your meetings

Hi team,

Overcomers sits exactly where this app does: between the 12 steps and the church. So this is a complement question, not a competition one.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One. There's a faith track woven into the daily lessons for anyone who chooses it — God as you understand God, no denomination, nothing argued. Free, private, no card. It also has a section for the person who loves someone using, which almost nothing else has.

Your groups meet weekly; the app lives in the six days between. If it's worth a line in your resources, use it. If something in it would put your people off, tell me and I'll change it.

10. RU Recovery / Reformers Unanimous — the chapter network

Send to: [confirm on rurecovery.com — "Find a Chapter / Start Your RU Chapter" pages; a chapter leader answers faster than the national office] Subject: A free recovery app your chapter leaders can hand out

Hi team,

RU exists to bring transformation to hurting people — and a chapter leader needs tools that cost nothing and ask nothing.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One. Free, private, no card, no account needed to start. A day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a lesson a day, a faith track (God as you understand God — no denomination), and a section for the person who loves someone using.

A chapter can hand it out with no budget line and no paperwork. If it's worth a mention to your chapter network, take it; if it isn't, tell me what a chapter member would need that it doesn't do.

11. Alcoholics Victorious — the list of lists

Send to: [confirm on alcoholicsvictorious.org — they keep the NACR directory of Christian recovery networks] Subject: A Christian recovery app for your network directory

Hi,

Your NACR page is one of the only lists of Christian recovery networks anywhere — which makes you the right person to ask this of.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One. It has a faith track in the daily lessons (God as you understand God, no denomination) and a section for the person who loves someone using, which almost nothing else has. Free, private, no card.

If it belongs on a list your network keeps, take it. If it doesn't, tell me why — that's more useful to me than a polite no.

12. Pure Desire Ministries — the porn track

Send to: [confirm on puredesire.org — contact page] Subject: A free app for the hours between your groups

Hi team,

Pure Desire runs church groups for sexual recovery, and group leaders need take-home tools that cost nothing and ask nothing.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One. It has a full track for quitting porn — private, free, no card, no account needed to start — a day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a faith track (God as you understand God), and a section for the spouse, which almost nothing else has. Nothing in it requires a name.

Your groups meet weekly; the app lives in the six days between. If it's worth a mention in your resources, take it. If something would put your people off, tell me and I'll change it.

13. The Nathan Project — smaller door, same letter

Send to: [confirm on nathanproject.net] Subject: A free app for men and women quitting porn

Hi,

The Nathan Project serves the exact person this app was built for: someone quitting porn who wants it to be between them and God, not them and an app company.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One. A full porn track, free, private, no account needed. Daily lessons, a day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, a faith track, and a section for the spouse — which almost nothing else has.

If it's worth a line in your resources or a mention to your small groups, take it. If not, tell me why.

14. Covenant Eyes — the complement, carefully

Send to: [confirm on covenanteyes.com – read the note below before sending] Subject: A free companion app — you monitor, we companion

Hi team,

You are the #1 quit-porn app for Christians, and this isn't a pitch to compete. Different job.

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, then built Turn Someday Into Day One — free, private, no card. Covenant Eyes holds someone accountable; this is what they open at 2am between check-ins: a day counter, tools for the worst ten minutes, daily lessons, a faith track (God as you understand God), and a section for the spouse, which almost nothing else has.

Two honest questions: is there room on your resources page for a free companion tool, and would your podcast ever feature someone with a 38-year story? Either way, thank you for what you do.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Malone St. Louis, MO

Note: Covenant Eyes charges for its own app, so the pitch is only ever the complement framing above — "you monitor, we companion." Never a "free alternative" framing, which would be both false and a dead end.

15. A university HR office — the two-sided play, staff side

Where: [name + address from the university's HR/benefits page – the SCHOOLS.md master email is the pattern] Subject: A free wellbeing resource for [University] staff

Hi,

I'm an app builder in St. Louis, and I'll keep this short because I know your inbox.

I built a private recovery-and-wellbeing app called Turn Someday Into Day One — a day counter, SOS tools for the hard ten minutes, 90-day programs across 13 habit tracks (alcohol, food, gambling, social media, anger and more), and a whole section for the person worried about someone they love. That second part doesn't exist in any other app, and in any staff room it's the bigger group.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 I got free and built the thing I'd needed. That's the whole company — me.

Free for staff to start, completely private (nobody sees anyone's data — not us, not the university, not a spouse), opt-in, nothing for your office to run. If you'd consider it for a staff wellness email or benefits materials, I'll write the paragraph for you.

That's the whole ask: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One · St. Louis

Order for Part 2: 9 and 10 first (Overcomers, RU — the closest fits). 12–14 are the porn-track doors: same letter, most sensitive audience, one at a time. 11 is the cheapest send (a directory keeper). 15 waits for a named HR contact, exactly like SCHOOLS.md. National offices are slow; a local chapter leader is fast — local first, St. Louis first.

The six earlier drafts from NEW-SPACES.md (22 Aug) are not reprinted here: Recovery Friendly Missouri (#1), ARHE collegiate (#2), Union MAP (#3), First responders (#4), Celebrate Recovery (#5), Gambling councils (#6). They are already finished in NEW-SPACES.md if you want the whole pile.
