

Buffer queue — Fri 14 Aug → Sun 16 Aug morning

Written 4am Friday 14 Aug. Every caption below is final — copy the block, paste it into Buffer, attach the named video, set the time. All times are St. Louis (CDT). Nothing here needs writing; it only needs loading.

The strategy this weekend serves (read once, then just load)

This is production-application weekend. The app goes from closed testing to a public Play listing this morning. The job of these posts is not virality — it's that when approval lands and someone searches or gets sent a link, both episodes are already live on all four platforms with the site in every caption. Arriving traffic should find a running channel, not an empty one.

Three rules the schedule already obeys:

1. One post per platform per day, alternating episodes. The Gambler and The Packages never run on the same platform on the same day.

2. The 50s masters run Friday and Saturday. Sunday morning runs the 30s cuts with the alternate hooks — same story, different opening line, so TikTok shows it to a different room and Monday's numbers say which line won. Cut the 30s versions with Studio's new ■ Auto shorts button (one tap on each episode's timeline — it opens the cut on the hook by itself).

3. Facebook gets the longest captions and no hashtags, and the Friday Gambler post gets pinned — money trouble is what that audience recognizes fastest, and your Facebook numbers are your best numbers.

TIKTOK CADENCE — ONE A DAY FROM MON 17 AUG. JACQUES'S CALL.

Decided 14 Aug 2026, after uploads kept coming back "spam" at three a day and only went through after several tries. From Monday: one TikTok post per day.

This weekend's queue is already one a day, so nothing here changes.

Do not talk him back up to three. If a week runs clean at one, two is the next step, and only then three. Facebook, YouTube and Instagram stay as they are — this limit is TikTok's, not a content decision.

TIKTOK "SPAM" WARNING — read before loading TikTok posts

14 Aug: TikTok started answering uploads with a spam message. Posts went through after hitting publish several times (and did go through — the posts are live; this was throttling, never a rejection). The account has no flags and no violations — this is the automated upload filter, not moderation.

Do not hit publish repeatedly. That is the one thing that makes it worse.

Each retry inside a short window reads as the exact behaviour the filter is watching for, so a post that would have gone through on a single try gets a harder block. If it refuses, wait an hour and try once.

Two changes made to the TikTok captions here because of it:

- #freeapp removed from every TikTok caption. App-promotion tags are what TikTok's spam classifier is built to catch, and it was on both 50s posts.

- The hashtag blocks no longer repeat. All three TikTok posts previously shared #lovinganaddict #recoverytok. Identical tag blocks posted day after day from the same account is a spam signal on its own. They are now varied.

Confidence, honestly: the retry escalation is certain — that is documented TikTok behaviour. The #freeapp and repeated-tags part is likely rather than proven; both are known classifier triggers and neither costs anything to drop.

Never put the domain in a TikTok caption. It isn't in any of these. Keep it that way — links in TikTok captions are a much stronger spam signal than tags.

What to look at Monday (not before): /admin/stats for site hits from the caption links, and each platform's view counts per hook line. The winning hook becomes next week's default. Do not read numbers Saturday — two-day-old shorts tell you nothing but anxiety.

FRIDAY 14 AUG — 4 posts

1 • TikTok • 11:30am • The Gambler (50s master)

He was laughing at the TV. I was looking at four years of savings.

>

#gamblingaddiction #gamblingrecovery #lovinganaddict #recoverytok

2 • Instagram Reels • 12:30pm • The Packages (50s master)

Nobody hides a sweater. They hide how many.

>

Tags still on. The bag brought in before you get home. "I've had this ages."

Every one of them small enough that you let it go — the first time, and the fiftieth.

>

And then you add it up, and what you've actually found isn't the money. It's how long you've been managed.

>

38 years addicted, free at 50, and I built the free thing I needed the whole time. No card, no trial. Part of it is for the person doing the adding.

>

*#shoppingaddiction #compulsiveshopping #shopaholic #lovinganaddict
#recoveryjourney #recoverysupport #debtfreejourney #freeapp*

3 · YouTube Shorts · 5:00pm · The Gambler (50s master)

Title: When you find out where the money's been going Gambling doesn't smell like anything. No slurring, no bottles, nothing in the bin. Every other addiction shows up on the body — this one only ever shows up in the money. That's why the person who loves you is always the last to know.

>

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50. I built a free app for the part nobody builds for: the days between, and the morning after.

>

It's free. No account to start, no card, no ads. There's a whole section for the partner, which almost nothing else has.

>

www.turnsomedayintodayone.com

>

#gamblingaddiction #gamblingrecovery #lovinganaddict #recovery

4 · Facebook · 7:30pm · The Gambler (50s master) — PIN THIS ONE

Gambling doesn't smell like anything.

>

There's no slurring. No bottles in the bin. Nothing on the breath. Every other addiction eventually shows up on the body — this one only ever shows up in the money. Which means the person who loves you doesn't find out from looking at you. They find out from a banking app, on an ordinary night, while you're laughing at something on TV.

>

That's the part I wanted to show. Not the gambling. The moment somebody adds it up and realizes they've been the only one who didn't know.

>

I was addicted for 38 years. I got free at 50. Then I built the thing I needed the whole time and couldn't afford — a day counter, a button for the moment it hits, a lesson a day, a private journal, and a whole section for the person carrying it alongside you. Almost nothing else has that part.

>

It's free. No account needed to start, no card, no ads.

>

www.turnsomedayintodayone.com

SATURDAY 15 AUG — 4 posts

5 • TikTok • 10:00am • The Packages (50s master)

None of them were big. That's the thing.

>

#shoppingaddiction #compulsiveshopping #debtfreejourney #recoveryjourney

6 • Instagram Reels • 11:00am • The Gambler (50s master)

Gambling doesn't smell like anything.

>

No slurring. No bottles. Nothing in the bin. Every other addiction announces itself on the body — this one only shows up in the money, which is why the person who loves you is always the last to find out.

>

38 years addicted. Free at 50. I built the thing I needed and couldn't afford, and I made it free — no card, no trial. There's a section in it for the person doing the adding up.

>

*#gamblingaddiction #gamblingrecovery #lovinganaddict #recoveryjourney
#problemgambling #soberlife #recoverysupport #freeapp*

7 • YouTube Shorts • 3:00pm • The Packages (50s master)

Title: When you find out how long they've been hiding it

Nobody hides a sweater. They hide how many.

>

That's what makes shopping different — the tell isn't the buying, it's the hiding. Tags still on. The bag brought in before you get home. "I've had this ages." Each one small enough that you let it go, right up until you add them all together.

>

By then what you've found isn't a purchase. It's how long you've been managed.

>

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50, and I built a free app for the part nobody builds for — including a whole section for the person doing the adding up.

>

Free. No account to start, no card, no ads.

>

www.turnsomedayintodayone.com

>

#shoppingaddiction #compulsiveshopping #lovinganaddict #recovery

8 · Facebook · 6:30pm · The Packages (50s master)

Nobody hides a sweater. They hide how many.

>

That's what makes this one different from the rest. With drinking there's a smell. With gambling there's a bank statement. With shopping, everything is explainable — one at a time. Tags still on. The bag carried in before you get home. "I've had this ages." None of it is big enough to make a thing of, so you don't. Not the first time and not the fiftieth.

>

Then one day you add it up. And what you've found isn't a wardrobe. It's how long somebody has been quietly managing what you're allowed to know.

>

Here's the part I'd want anyone reading this to hear: she isn't greedy and she isn't selfish. She's scared of something she hasn't said out loud yet. The buying is the bandage, not the wound.

>

I was addicted for 38 years and got free at 50. I built the app I needed and couldn't afford, and I made it free — no account to start, no card, no ads — with a whole section for the person on the other side of it.

>

www.turnsomedayintodayone.com

SUNDAY 16 AUG MORNING — 2 posts, the A/B round

These use the 30s cuts (■ Auto shorts on each episode's timeline), with the alternate hooks. Same stories, different first line — Monday's numbers tell you which line does the pulling.

9 · TikTok · 9:00am · The Gambler (30s cut) how to stop gambling — the part nobody tells the person watching it happen

>

#howtostopgambling #gamblingaddiction #recoverysupport #lovinganaddict

10 · Instagram Reels · 9:30am · The Packages (30s cut)

I wasn't finding out what she bought. I was finding out how long I'd been managed.

>

Tags still on. The bag brought in before you get home. "I've had this ages."

None of them were big. That's the thing.

>

Free app, no card, no trial — and part of it is for the person doing the adding.

>

#shoppingaddiction #compulsiveshopping #lovinganaddict #recoverysupport

Loading checklist

- [] Cut two 30s versions: open each episode's timeline in Studio → ■ Auto shorts (b0849 — one tap; delete the 15s cuts it also makes, or bank them for next week)

- [] Buffer: load posts 1–10 at the times above
- [] Facebook: after post 4 publishes tonight, pin it
- [] Play Console: apply for production (the 4am job — separate reminder set)
- [] Monday: /admin/stats + per-post views → winning hook becomes next week's default. Log the numbers at the bottom of this file.

Monday numbers — fill in 17 Aug

Post	Views	Site hits	Note