

The episode library — one habit each

Written 14 Aug 2026, same build as the Couples series. Ten shots each, one line of narration per shot, ready to paste into Manus.

WHERE THE ARTWORK STANDS — 14 Aug 2026

#	Episode	Habit	Images
1	The Gambler	Gambling	■ done, posting this weekend
2	The Packages	Shopping	■ done, posting this weekend
3	The Room I Grew Up In	Alcohol / spiritual, trans	■ not generated
4	The Light Turns Green	Anger / road rage	■ generated 14 Aug
5	Somebody Needs Me	Gaming	■ generated 14 Aug
6	The Respectable One	Work	■ generated 14 Aug
7	The Hoodie	Smoking / vaping	■ not generated
8	The Empty Chair	Substances	■ not generated
9	The Second Dinner	Food / bingeing	■ generated 14 Aug
10	The Hours	Doomscrolling	■ not generated

Four left: 3, 7, 8 and 10 — 40 images. Manus's advanced models are free until 25 Aug 2026. After that every one of them costs. Do not let the window close with three episodes unbanked; images keep, a free window does not.

House look — paste at the end of EVERY image prompt cinematic photograph, shot on 35mm, shallow depth of field, warm practical light from lamps and screens only, muted color grade, documentary realism, vertical 9:16 composition, ordinary American apartment, no text in the image

Keep each character's description word for word identical in every prompt or the face drifts between shots.

The rule they all obey

The person using is never the villain and never let off. Every episode carries one line that says they're not a bad person and one that says that's what makes it hard. That pair is what people recognise and what no advert says.

Some are told from the inside — doomscrolling, gaming, work, anger — because those have no witness. Nobody walks in on them. The only person who can find them is you. The rest are told by the person who found out — the parent, the wife — which is the Couples-series shape.

EPISODE 10 · The Hours — a man, doomscrolling

Off the bench 14 Aug 2026. Nia's episode became the spiritual one, so doomscrolling is his again. Unchanged from when it was written.

DEAN: Black man, mid 40s, shaved head, broad shoulders, short beard going grey at the chin, plain dark t-shirt.

Doomscrolling's tell is time, and nothing else. There is no smell, no receipt, no charge on a statement, nothing in the bin. Every other addiction leaves something behind for someone to find. This one leaves an empty evening. That's why the discovery has to come from a screen-time report — it's the only witness there is. Build the whole piece on that.

SHOT 1 — DEAN lying on his back on a sofa in a dark living room at night, phone held above his face, the screen the only light in the room, TV off

"I wasn't doing anything bad."

SHOT 2 — Close on DEAN's face lit blue from below by a phone screen, eyes moving, expression flat, no reaction to anything he is seeing

"That's what I kept telling myself."

SHOT 3 — A wall clock in a dark room reading 1:40, the room otherwise unlit except for a glow from off-frame

"I'd look up and two hours were gone."

SHOT 4 — Close on a phone screen showing a weekly screen time report, a bar chart, one bar much higher than the others, a thumb resting still on the glass

"Then the phone told me the number."

SHOT 5 — DEAN sitting up on the edge of the sofa in the dark, phone face-down on his knee, both hands over his mouth, staring at nothing

"Seven hours a day. For a year."

SHOT 6 — A kitchen calendar on a wall with most days blank, one square circled and passed, morning light coming in from a window

"That's a year of evenings."

SHOT 7 — A basketball sitting deflated in the corner of a garage behind a stack of boxes, dusty, untouched

"I used to do things."

SHOT 8 — DEAN standing at a kitchen counter in the morning, phone plugged in and face-down across the room from him, coffee in his hand, looking at it

"I'm not a lazy man."

SHOT 9 — Close on DEAN's hand setting the phone down screen-first on a shelf in another room and drawing back, doorway visible beyond

"That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 10 — DEAN sitting on his front steps in early evening light with no phone anywhere in frame, elbows on knees, looking out at the street

"So I gave myself back one night."

YouTube: The night my phone told me how much of my life I'd spent on it TikTok: I looked up and two hours were gone. Then the phone showed me the year.

1. 01_sofa	Still	5.0s	cut	I wasn't doing anything bad.
2. 02_face	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	That's what I kept telling myself.
3. 03_clock	Still	5.0s	cut	I'd look up and two hours were gone.
4. 04_report	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Then the phone told me the number.
5. 05_handsup	Still	5.0s	cut	Seven hours a day. For a year.
6. 06_calendar	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	That's a year of evenings.
7. 07_ball	Still	5.0s	cut	I used to do things.
8. 08_counter	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I'm not a lazy man.
9. 09_setdown	Still	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
10. 10_steps	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So I gave myself back one night.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: Doomscrolling doesn't leave anything behind. No bottles, no receipts, nothing for anyone to find. Just an evening that's gone and no memory of what was in it. I built a free app for the habits that don't look like anything. No card, no trial.

#doomscrolling #phoneaddiction #screentime #digitaldetox #recoverysupport

EPISODE 3 · The Room I Grew Up In — a trans woman, the spiritual one · ALCOHOL

NIA: Black trans woman, early 30s, shoulder-length braids, gold hoop earrings, soft round face, oversized cardigan.

Replaced her doomscrolling episode, 14 Aug 2026, at Jacques's call — and it says outright that she is trans. The earlier version deliberately never mentioned it. This one names it in shot 3, because a story that will not say what it is about cannot be found by the people it is for.

The turn is the opposite of Curtis's. Episode 8 is a man who stopped showing up. She never stopped — the room closed. That distinction is the whole piece, and it is why the two spiritual episodes do not repeat each other: his guilt is that he left, hers is that she would still go.

Alcohol, from the 13 in the app. The app's own line for it is "You weren't chasing a drink. You were chasing peace — the quiet that comes when you're not running your own defence." For someone who has to defend her existence to strangers, that lands harder than it does for anyone else, and it never has to be explained on screen.

Three rules, and they matter more here than anywhere else in the series.

1. She is tired, not frightened, and never pitiable. No crying, no cowering.

2. No denomination, no scripture, no argument, and no villain. The building is never named and nobody in it is shown behaving badly. The film is about what she lost, not about who to blame.

3. Nothing preachy at the end. She finds a different room with chairs in a circle. That is all that happens.

SHOT 1 — NIA in her own kitchen on a Sunday morning, dressed for nothing in particular, coffee in hand, radio on, ordinary light

"I didn't leave God."

SHOT 2 — Close on NIA's hands resting still on a kitchen counter, head slightly turned, listening to something off-frame

"The room left me."

SHOT 3 — A small ordinary church across a street seen through a car windscreen from a distance, a few people going in, nobody's face readable

"I transitioned at twenty-nine. That building stopped at twenty-eight."

SHOT 4 — Close on NIA in a driver's seat, hands in her lap, watching something across the street, not moving to get out

"I still park across the street some Sundays."

SHOT 5 — A childhood photograph held on a fridge by a magnet, a kid in Sunday clothes on a church step, slightly out of focus

"I know every word they're singing in there."

SHOT 6 — Close on a single empty glass in a kitchen sink in flat morning light, nothing else in the sink

"What I was actually after was the quiet."

SHOT 7 — NIA sitting on the edge of her bed at night in a dark room, phone dark beside her, both feet on the floor

"One drink bought an hour of not defending myself."

SHOT 8 — NIA washing dishes at a window in daylight, eyes closed, mouth moving, singing to herself

"My body still remembers the songs. That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 9 — NIA at a kitchen table in daylight with two friends, hands held across the table, mugs and plates, warm

"I'm not a faithless woman. That was never the problem."

SHOT 10 — NIA standing in the open doorway of a bright ordinary hall with chairs set in a circle, stepping in, coat still on

"So I stopped waiting on that door, and found one that opened."

YouTube: I didn't leave God. The room left me.

TikTok: I transitioned at twenty-nine. That building stopped at twenty-eight.

1. 01_sunday	Still	5.0s	cut	I didn't leave God.
2. 02_hands	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	The room left me.
3. 03_church	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I transitioned at twenty-nine. That building stopped at twenty-eight.
4. 04_windscreen	Still	5.0s	cut	I still park across the street some Sundays.
5. 05_photo	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I know every word they're singing in there.
6. 06_glass	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	What I was actually after was the quiet.
7. 07_bededge	Still	5.0s	cut	One drink bought an hour of not defending myself.
8. 08_dishes	Still	5.0s	cut	My body still remembers the songs. That's what makes it hard.
9. 09_friends	Still	5.0s	cut	I'm not a faithless woman. That was never the problem.
10. 10_doorway	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So I stopped waiting on that door, and found one that opened.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: I didn't leave God. The room left me. I transitioned at twenty-nine and that building stopped at twenty-eight — and I still know every word they're singing in there. What I was actually after was the quiet, and a drink sells you an hour of it. There's a spiritual track in my free app and it never asks which church. No card, no trial.

#transrecovery #lgbtqrecovery #faithandrecovery #sobriety #recoverysupport

EPISODE 7 · The Hoodie — a parent, a teenager, smoking

DEE: white woman, late 40s, hair up in a clip, reading glasses pushed on her head, cardigan, tired kind face.

TYLER: her son, 16, tall and skinny, dark curly hair over his eyes, school hoodie, headphones round his neck.

The parent's discovery isn't the cigarettes. It's the system. Anyone can find a vape in a wash basket. What lands is the second thing she works out — that the hiding was organised. Windows, timing, the extra hoodie, the mints in the bag. He wasn't sneaking; he was managing her, and he'd been doing it well enough that she never once wondered.

The instinct is to make the parent angry. Don't. Make her impressed and frightened at the same time — that's the real feeling and nobody films it.

SHOT 1 — DEE loading a washing machine in a small utility room, a pile of teenage clothes on the floor, ordinary evening

"It was in the wash."

SHOT 2 — Close on DEE's hand pulling a vape out of a hoodie pocket, holding it in her palm, laundry blurred behind

"Not a big dramatic discovery."

SHOT 3 — DEE standing very still in the utility room holding the hoodie, staring at nothing, the machine door open

"I stood there a long time."

SHOT 4 — A teenager's bedroom door, closed, music faintly implied, a hallway lamp on, hall carpet

"He was fifteen feet away doing homework."

SHOT 5 — Close on a bedroom windowsill from inside, window open a few inches, a small tin ashtray hidden behind a curtain

"Then I found the window."

SHOT 6 — Close on the inside of a school bag on a bed, a packet of strong mints and a spare deodorant among books

"And the mints. And the spare hoodie."

SHOT 7 — DEE sitting on the bottom stair in the hall, hoodie still in her hands, looking up toward the landing

"That's when it landed. He wasn't sneaking."

SHOT 8 — A framed school photo of TYLER at about eight on a hallway wall, slightly out of focus, foreground dark

"He was managing me. For months."

SHOT 9 — DEE and TYLER at a kitchen table the next morning, both hands around mugs, TYLER looking down, no shouting, daylight

"He's not a bad kid."

SHOT 10 — Wide of the same kitchen, both of them still sitting, TYLER now looking at her, the vape on the table between them untouched

"That's what makes it hard."

YouTube: I found my son's vape. Then I found the system around it.

TikTok: He wasn't sneaking. He was managing me.

1. 01_wash	Still	5.0s	cut	It was in the wash.
2. 02_hand	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Not a big dramatic discovery.
3. 03_still	Still	5.0s	cut	I stood there a long time.
4. 04_door	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	He was fifteen feet away doing homework.
5. 05_window	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Then I found the window.
6. 06_bag	Still	5.0s	cut	And the mints. And the spare hoodie.
7. 07_stair	Still	5.0s	cut	That's when it landed. He wasn't sneaking.
8. 08_photo	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	He was managing me. For months.
9. 09_kitchen	Still	5.0s	cut	He's not a bad kid.
10. 10_wide	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: Finding it isn't the hard part. The hard part is the hour afterwards, when you work out how organised the hiding was and how long you didn't notice. There's a whole section in my free app for the person who found out, not just the person who's using.

#parentingteens #vaping #quitsmoking #teenvaping #lovinganaddict

EPISODE 8 · The Empty Chair — the spiritual one · SUBSTANCES

CURTIS: Black man, 50s, greying close beard, collared shirt with the sleeves rolled, heavy hands, reading glasses in his breast pocket.

Addiction: Substances, Jacques's pick. The app's own faith line for it is *"You wanted lifting out of yourself — transcendence, the old word for it.

That's not a defect, it's the most human appetite there is."* That is the episode's whole argument, and it's the reason this pairs with the spiritual track better than any of the other twelve: the appetite underneath it was already a religious one. Film and app say one thing instead of two.

■ NOTHING IS SHOWN. This is a hard rule, not a style note.

>

No pills, no powder, no needles, no paraphernalia, no use, no substance named — not in a single frame, not blurred, not in the background. TikTok and Meta remove content that depicts drugs, and being a recovery story is not an exemption; it is the category their filters watch hardest. One prop ends this episode's reach and can put a strike on the account.

>

The film is built entirely on absence — an empty chair, a dark hallway, a dusty book, hands with nothing in them. That is not a workaround. It is the truer version: what this actually looks like from the inside is rooms you stopped going into, not anything anyone could photograph.

This matches the new onboarding question exactly — the one that asks about stepping away, tied to whatever the person picked. So the film has to say the same thing the app says: you didn't stop believing, you stopped showing up, and something moved into the space. That order matters. It is not "you left God so you got punished." It is "a room went empty and something filled it."

Keep it open. No denomination, no building named, no scripture quoted. Some people watching left a church, some left a sponsor, some left a father. The film works for all three only if it never gets specific.

No outcome claims. Nothing is fixed at the end — he goes back and sits down, that's all.

SHOT 1 — CURTIS sitting alone in a parked car outside a building at dusk, hands on the wheel, engine off, not getting out

"I didn't stop believing."

SHOT 2 — Close on CURTIS's face through a car windscreen, evening light, looking toward something off-frame he isn't moving toward

"I stopped showing up."

SHOT 3 — An empty wooden chair in a plain room with light coming through a window onto it, dust in the air

"First it was one week. Something came up."

SHOT 4 — The same empty chair in the same room, now in flat grey daylight, everything slightly dustier, a jacket left over the back of it

"Then it was a year."

SHOT 5 — CURTIS alone at a kitchen table at night, one lamp on, the table completely bare in front of him, the rest of the house dark and put away, his eyes on the middle distance

"Something moves into a room you stop going into."

SHOT 6 — Close on CURTIS's open empty hands resting on a bare kitchen table, knuckles heavy, nothing else on the table at all

"I wasn't chasing a feeling. I wanted lifting out of myself."

SHOT 7 — A worn book on a shelf with a bookmark still in it, a thin layer of dust on the top edge, warm lamp light

"That's the oldest want there is. It just got answered wrong."

SHOT 8 — CURTIS standing in a doorway at first light, shirt untucked, looking out, hand on the frame

"I'm not a faithless man. That was never the problem."

SHOT 9 — Wide of CURTIS walking alone along an ordinary street in early morning, buildings and parked cars, no destination visible, empty-handed

"That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 10 — CURTIS sitting down in the same wooden chair from earlier, room now lit, jacket over the back, hands empty in his lap

"So I went back and sat down."

YouTube: I didn't stop believing. I stopped showing up.

TikTok: I wasn't chasing a feeling. I wanted lifting out of myself.

1. 01_car	Still	5.0s	cut	I didn't stop believing.
2. 02_face	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I stopped showing up.
3. 03_chair	Still	5.0s	cut	First it was one week. Something came up.
4. 04_chair2	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Then it was a year.
5. 05_table	Still	5.0s	cut	Something moves into a room you stop going into.
6. 06_hands	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I wasn't chasing a feeling. I wanted lifting out of myself.
7. 07_book	Still	5.0s	cut	That's the oldest want there is. It just got answered wrong.
8. 08_doorway	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I'm not a faithless man. That was never the problem.

9. 09_street	Still	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
10. 10_sitdown	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So I went back and sat down.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: Nobody wakes up and decides to walk away. You miss one week because something came up, then it's a year, and something has moved into the room you stopped going into. What I actually wanted was lifting out of myself — and that's the oldest want there is. It just got answered wrong. There's a spiritual track in my free app, and it asks that question before it asks anything else.

#recovery #faithandrecovery #spiritualrecovery #recoverysupport #sobriety

Notes for whoever cuts these

- Episode 5 and 6 are the two with real reach. 5 has no competition at all in this category; 6 sits on parent search terms, which are high-intent and cheap because everyone else targets the person using.
- Episode 7 goes out on a Sunday morning. It is the only one of the four with a natural slot, and Sunday morning is the cheapest attention in the week for that audience.
- Every hook line is the TikTok caption's first sentence. That is deliberate — same words twice means the caption confirms the video instead of competing with it.
- No outcome claims anywhere in the four. Nobody quits, nobody is fixed, nothing is cured. Every ending is one small action. That is a policy line for a health-adjacent app as much as a taste one.

EPISODE 4 · The Light Turns Green — anger, road rage

HECTOR: Latino man, late 30s, close-trimmed beard, work polo shirt, forearm tattoo, short dark hair.

MATEO: his son, 7, small for his age, school polo, backpack.

Anger is the only one on the list nobody calls an addiction, because there is nothing to buy and nothing to hide. But it runs the identical loop — the hit, the crash, the promise — and road rage is where it's cleanest: a sealed box, a stranger who will never know your name, and a witness in the back seat.

The turn is not the shouting. It's the mimicry. He doesn't stop because he feels guilty; he stops because he sees his own hands on his son.

SHOT 1 — HECTOR driving in daylight with MATEO in a booster seat in the back, both relaxed, radio on, ordinary afternoon

"Nobody calls this an addiction."

SHOT 2 — Close on HECTOR's hands tightening on a steering wheel, knuckles going pale

"There's nothing to buy. Nothing to hide."

SHOT 3 — Close on HECTOR's face mid-shout inside a car, mouth open, neck tight, windows up

"Twenty seconds, and it's free."

SHOT 4 — Close on MATEO in the back seat seen through a rearview mirror, gone completely still, eyes down, hands in his lap

"He stopped talking in the back seat."

SHOT 5 — HECTOR alone in a parked car in a driveway, engine off, both hands over his face

"I always said sorry."

SHOT 6 — MATEO at a kitchen table doing homework, very quiet, not looking up, evening light

"He stopped asking to come with me."

SHOT 7 — Close on MATEO's small hands gripping the wheel of a ride-on toy car in a yard, knuckles tight, the same shape as his father's

"Then I saw him hold a wheel like that."

SHOT 8 — HECTOR standing in a dark hallway outside a child's bedroom door, hand raised but not touching it

"I'm not a violent man."

SHOT 9 — HECTOR sitting on the edge of his bed at night, phone dark in his hand, staring at the floor

"That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 10 — HECTOR driving the next morning with MATEO in the back, another car cutting in front of him, HECTOR's hands loose on the wheel, MATEO talking

"So somebody cut me off, and I let it go."

YouTube: My son stopped talking in the back seat

TikTok: Then I saw him hold a wheel like that.

1. 01_drive	Still	5.0s	cut	Nobody calls this an addiction.
2. 02_knuckles	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	There's nothing to buy. Nothing to hide.
3. 03_shout	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Twenty seconds, and it's free.
4. 04_mirror	Still	5.0s	cut	He stopped talking in the back seat.
5. 05_driveway	Still	5.0s	cut	I always said sorry.
6. 06_homework	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	He stopped asking to come with me.
7. 07_toywheel	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Then I saw him hold a wheel like that.
8. 08_hallway	Still	5.0s	cut	I'm not a violent man.
9. 09_bededge	Still	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
10. 10_letitgo	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So somebody cut me off, and I let it go.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: Nobody calls this one an addiction. There's nothing to buy, nothing to hide, and it's over in twenty seconds — so it just runs for years. I stopped the day I saw my son hold a toy wheel the way I hold mine. Free app, and anger is one of the tracks in it.

#angerissues #roadrage #angermanagement #fatherhood #recoverysupport

EPISODE 5 · Somebody Needs Me — gaming

ELI: mixed-race man, 24, curly dark hair, headset around his neck, grey hoodie, thin build.

Gaming's tell is not the hours. It's that leaving feels like abandoning people. Every other habit isolates you; this one hands you a team that is counting on you at ten o'clock, and quitting means letting five real humans down. Nobody films that, and it is the entire reason people stay.

SHOT 1 — ELI at a desk in a dark bedroom at night, monitor light on his face, headset on, mouth moving, talking to someone

"I wasn't hiding. Everybody knew where I was."

SHOT 2 — Wide of the same bedroom in daylight with the curtains shut, plates stacked on the desk, bed unmade, monitors still on

"That's the part people get wrong."

SHOT 3 — Close on a chat window on a monitor, text deliberately blurred and unreadable, a cursor blinking

"Somebody in there needed me at ten o'clock."

SHOT 4 — ELI asleep at the desk, head on his forearm, headset still on, dawn light at the edge of the curtain

"So I was never the one who left."

SHOT 5 — A dining table set for three with one chair pushed back and empty, the food on that plate gone cold

"They stopped waiting to eat."

SHOT 6 — Close on ELI's hand on a mouse, thumb moving, the rest of him completely still

"In there I was good at something."

SHOT 7 — A folded shirt still in its packaging on a chair with a lanyard beside it, a layer of dust on both

"Out here I was behind on everything."

SHOT 8 — ELI standing in a dark kitchen at 4am eating cereal, phone face-up on the counter, rest of the house dark

"I'm not a waster."

SHOT 9 — ELI sitting on the edge of the bed holding the headset in both hands, monitors dark behind him

"That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 10 — ELI opening the curtains in daylight, the room bright for the first time, the desk behind him with the chair pushed in

"So I told them I'd be back. And I got up."

YouTube: Leaving the game felt like walking out on people

TikTok: Somebody in there needed me at ten o'clock.

1. 01_desk	Still	5.0s	cut	I wasn't hiding. Everybody knew where I was.
2. 02_daylight	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	That's the part people get wrong.
3. 03_chat	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Somebody in there needed me at ten o'clock.
4. 04_asleep	Still	5.0s	cut	So I was never the one who left.
5. 05_table	Still	5.0s	cut	They stopped waiting to eat.
6. 06_mouse	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	In there I was good at something.
7. 07_shirt	Still	5.0s	cut	Out here I was behind on everything.
8. 08_cereal	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I'm not a waster.
9. 09_headset	Still	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
10. 10_curtains	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So I told them I'd be back. And I got up.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: People think gaming addiction is about the hours. It isn't. It's that five real people are counting on you at ten o'clock, and leaving feels like walking out on them. That's why nobody just stops. Free app, no card, no trial.

#gamingaddiction #gaming #screentime #videogames #recoverysupport

EPISODE 6 · The Respectable One — work

MEG: white woman, 45, hair in a low ponytail, blazer over a t-shirt, reading glasses, tired eyes.

LILY: her daughter, 12, braces, school hoodie.

This is the one people congratulate you for, which is exactly what keeps it invisible for a decade. Every other habit gets whispered about; this one gets a plaque. The app's own line for it is the spine of the film: rest is the test — if you cannot stop, you're not working, you're worshipping.

Do not make her a bad mother and do not redeem her. She closes a laptop for one morning. That's the whole ending.

SHOT 1 — MEG at a kitchen table at 1am, laptop open, the screen the only light, the house dark behind her

"Nobody has an intervention for this one."

SHOT 2 — Close on MEG's face lit by a laptop screen, reading glasses on, no expression at all
"They give you a plaque."

SHOT 3 — A school hall with rows of chairs facing a small stage, one seat empty in an otherwise full row, audience blurred

"I missed it. Again."

SHOT 4 — Close on a phone screen showing a missed call and a photo message from a daughter, a thumb resting over it

"She stopped being surprised."

SHOT 5 — MEG at an office desk in daylight, a colleague's hand setting a coffee down beside her, both of them smiling

"I don't know how you do it."

SHOT 6 — A framed certificate on an office wall, very slightly crooked, lit by a window

"That's what they say to me."

SHOT 7 — LILY eating alone at a kitchen table with a tablet propped up in front of her, one plate, evening

"She eats at the table I work at."

SHOT 8 — MEG standing in a bedroom doorway looking at LILY asleep, laptop bag still on her shoulder

"I'm not a bad mother."

SHOT 9 — MEG sitting in a parked car outside her own house at night, engine off, hands in her lap, not going in

"That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 10 — MEG at the kitchen table in the morning with the laptop closed and pushed away, LILY beside her, two bowls between them

"So I closed it. For one morning."

YouTube: The addiction people give you a plaque for TikTok: Nobody has an intervention for this one. They give you a plaque.

1. 01_1am	Still	5.0s	cut	Nobody has an intervention for this one.
2. 02_face	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	They give you a plaque.
3. 03_hall	Still	5.0s	cut	I missed it. Again.
4. 04_phone	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	She stopped being surprised.
5. 05_office	Still	5.0s	cut	"I don't know how you do it."
6. 06_plaque	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	That's what they say to me.
7. 07_lily	Still	5.0s	cut	She eats at the table I work at.
8. 08_doorway	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I'm not a bad mother.
9. 09_car	Still	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
10. 10_closed	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So I closed it. For one morning.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: Every other habit gets whispered about. This one gets a plaque.

"I don't know how you do it" is what people say right up until the day you work out you've been hiding in plain sight, and getting praised for it. Work is one of the tracks in my free app.

#workaholic #workaddiction #burnout #workingmom #recoverysupport

EPISODE 9 · The Second Dinner — a couple, food and binging

RAY: Black man, mid 40s, broad, short beard going grey, work shirt.

TAMMY: Black woman, early 40s, braids, glasses, cardigan.

Every article about binge eating is written for a woman. Men who do this have nowhere to read about themselves, which is why this one flips the default — and why it's told from Tammy's side, like the Couples episodes.

Nobody hides a meal. They hide the second one. And the hiding place is never the house, because the house has her in it. It's the car.

SHOT 1 — RAY and TAMMY eating dinner together at a kitchen table, ordinary, plates half finished, warm light

"We eat dinner together every night."

SHOT 2 — RAY rinsing his plate at the sink, TAMMY leaving the room behind him, ordinary evening

"He never eats much in front of me."

SHOT 3 — A dark hallway at night seen from a bedroom doorway, a kitchen light on at the far end

"Then the kitchen light goes on at eleven."

SHOT 4 — TAMMY opening a car door in the morning, close on a door pocket packed tight with folded fast-food wrappers pushed down out of sight

"I found them in the car. Not the house."

SHOT 5 — Close on TAMMY's hands holding a paper receipt in a driver's seat, timestamp visible but not readable

"Eleven forty. Every night that week."

SHOT 6 — TAMMY sitting alone in the parked car in the driveway, both hands in her lap, staring through the windscreen

"Nobody hides a meal. They hide the second one."

SHOT 7 — A framed photo of RAY and TAMMY somewhere happy on a shelf, slightly out of focus, foreground dark

"He's not greedy."

SHOT 8 — RAY asleep in bed in the dark, TAMMY sitting up beside him awake, looking straight ahead

"That's what makes it hard."

SHOT 9 — RAY at the kitchen table in the morning, both hands around a mug, not looking up, TAMMY across from him

"He'd never said it out loud. Not once."

SHOT 10 — Wide of the kitchen, both of them at the table turned toward each other, plates cleared, mid-conversation

"So I asked. And then I shut up and listened."

YouTube: I found the wrappers in the car, not the house

TikTok: Nobody hides a meal. They hide the second one.

1. 01_dinner	Still	5.0s	cut	We eat dinner together every night.
2. 02_sink	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	He never eats much in front of me.
3. 03_hallway	Still	5.0s	cut	Then the kitchen light goes on at eleven.
4. 04_wrappers	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	I found them in the car. Not the house.
5. 05_receipt	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	Eleven forty. Every night that week.
6. 06_parked	Still	5.0s	cut	Nobody hides a meal. They hide the second one.
7. 07_photo	Zoom in	5.0s	cut	He's not greedy.

8. 08_awake	Still	5.0s	cut	That's what makes it hard.
9. 09_mug	Still	5.0s	cut	He'd never said it out loud. Not once.
10. 10_talking	Zoom out	5.0s	cut	So I asked. And then I shut up and listened.
11. 99-free-end	Still	3.0s	cut

Caption: Nobody hides a meal. They hide the second one — and never in the house, because the house has you in it. Every article about this is written for a woman, so the men doing it have nowhere to read about themselves. Free app, and there's a section for the person who found out.

#bingeeating #bingeeatingrecovery #emotionaleating #lovinganaddict #recoverysupport