

OUTREACH — NEW BATCH (18 Aug 2026, nothing here has been sent)

The original OUTREACH.md pile (rehab, weeks 1–6) is fully sent. This file is the next wave, plus the two categories you asked for that weren't covered yet: churches and jobs/workplaces.

Same rules as always: copy subject, copy body, paste, send, tick the box. Never pay for placement. If someone replies, answer the same day. A warm "no" is a finished conversation — never chase it.

Honesty markers on addresses. I could not open every site from here, so each entry says how the address was obtained:

- form — use the contact form on the linked page.
- verify — try info@ + their domain first, then the form.
- DM — message their page/account directly.

Fix the line here after a send so it's right next time.

SECTION A — INFLUENCERS (podcasts that do interviews)

Your first eight are out (INFLUENCERS.md). These are six new ones, all verified as interview shows in search on 18 Aug. Check the show's format before you send — that was the lesson from the Sober Powered "no": an interview pitch to a solo show reads as not having listened. All six below do guest interviews.

Send 1 or 2 at a time, not all six.

A1. Sobertown Podcast — Michal Charles

- [] Not sent · form/verify · <https://sobertownpodcast.com/> (contact page)

Subject: Guest idea: 38 years addicted, free at 50 — and I built the app for the whole family

Hi Michal,

Quick honest pitch for Sobertown.

I was addicted for 38 years — food, anger, and worse. At 50 it was do or die, and I got free. Then I built the thing I'd needed the whole time: Turn Someday Into Day One.

The part of my story I think your listeners would feel: it's built for two people, not one. Day counter, SOS tools for the worst ten minutes, 13 habit tracks for the person struggling — and a whole free section for the person who loves them. My wife watched it happen for decades. Families have had support groups since 1951; nobody ever built them software. I did.

I'm not polished. I'm a guy who lived it and came out the other side with something to show for it. If that fits the show, I'd love to come on. Either way, thanks for what you put out.

The app, if you want to look first: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques

A2. Dopey Podcast — Dave Manheim

- [] Not sent · form · <https://www.dopeypodcast.com/> (contact page)

Subject: Dopey guest: 38 years addicted, free at 50 — the family app nobody built

Hi Dave,

Pitching a story, not a product.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I got free — then taught myself to build and made the app I needed the whole time. It's called Turn Someday Into Day One.

The piece your audience doesn't hear enough: the section I built for the person who loves the addict. My wife carried every year of it with me and had no software, no program, nothing. Families have had support groups since 1951 and never a real app. That's the gap, and it's why people send my content to each other.

I keep it funny where I can and honest everywhere else — I figure Dopey's the show that gets that. If it fits, I'd love to come on. If not, no hard feelings.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques

A3. Recovery Rocks

• [] Not sent · form/verify · find the show's contact via its Spotify/Apple page

Subject: Guest idea: 38 years addicted, free at 50 — recovery for the person watching

Hi,

Quick pitch for Recovery Rocks.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I got free. Then I built the app I'd needed the whole time: Turn Someday Into Day One — day counter, SOS tools for the worst ten minutes, 13 habit tracks, and a whole free section for the person who loves the addict.

Your show talks about the real, awkward, human parts of recovery — first sober dates, surviving weddings. I can bring the other under-covered side: what it's like for the spouse who's been carrying two recoveries, and why I built her a program instead of a footnote.

If that fits, I'd love to come on. Either way, thanks for what you do.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques

A4. Sober Motivation — Brad McLeod

• [] Not sent · form/DM · <https://www.sobermotivation.com/> (contact) or DM

Subject: Sharing my story: 38 years addicted, free at 50, built the app for both sides

Hi Brad,

I follow what you put out and I'd like to offer my story.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I got free — then taught myself to build and made the app I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One. The piece that sets it apart: a whole free section for the person who loves the addict, because my wife lived every year of it with me and nobody ever built anything for her.

I'm not an influencer. I'm a guy who got out and built the tool he wished he'd had. If that story fits your platform, I'd be grateful for the chance to share it.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques

A5. The Sober Gay Podcast / LGBTQ+ recovery hosts

- [] Not sent · verify/DM — search current active LGBTQ+ recovery podcasts before sending

Subject: Guest idea: 38 years addicted, free at 50 — recovery that doesn't check who you are

Hi,

Quick pitch.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I got free. Then I built the app I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One. One thing I made a point of: the app never asks who you are — straight, gay, bi, neither, still figuring it out, man, woman, or none of the above. Addiction never checked who I was on the way in; it doesn't get to check on the way out.

I'd love to bring that message to your audience if it fits. Story first, app second — I lived it.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques

A6. Sober Curator follow-up / "Sober Spotlight" (if no reply yet)

- [] Not sent · one follow-up only, then let go

Subject: Re: Sober Spotlight submission — 38 years addicted, free at 50, built the app I needed

Hi — floating my Sober Spotlight note back up once.

Short version: 38 years addicted, free at 50, then I built the app I needed — Turn Someday Into Day One — with a whole free section for the person who loves the addict, because my wife lived it with me and nobody ever built anything for her. The film series is finished now too, so there's a visual story to go with it.

Either way, thanks for what you put out.

Jacques

SECTION B — CHURCHES / FAITH RECOVERY (new category)

The angle: Celebrate Recovery and similar church recovery ministries run weekly groups for "hurts, hang-ups, and habits." The leader of that group is a natural ally — they already hand out resources every week, and their members' families are exactly your supporter audience. You're not selling them anything; you're offering a free tool to hand to the family members sitting in the lobby while their loved one is in the meeting.

The one rule: keep it free, keep it private, never mention money. This is a "here's a free thing for your families" note, not a pitch.

The ask: one mention from the group leader or a flyer/handout on the resource table. That's it.

B-master — use this body, change the first line per church

Subject: A free app for the family members in your recovery group

Hi,

I'm a St. Louis app builder and I'll keep this short.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 I got free, and I built the app I'd needed the whole time: Turn Someday Into Day One — a day counter, SOS tools for the hard ten minutes, and 30-day programs across 13 habits.

The part built for your group specifically: a whole free section for the person watching a loved one struggle. The spouse in the lobby, the parent at home, the adult child — they've been carrying two recoveries, and they've never had a program of their own. This gives them one, private and free to start.

The ask is small: if it fits, a mention at a meeting or a spot on your resource table. I'll supply the one-paragraph blurb or a flyer myself — zero work on your side.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One · St. Louis

The target list (6)

#	Target	Route
B1	Celebrate Recovery national — ask about their resource/marketing channel	form https://celebraterecovery.com/
B2	Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of St. Louis — recovery + behavioral health arm	form https://www.ccstl.org/ (contact)
B3	A local Celebrate Recovery group (search "Celebrate Recovery St. Louis") — the leader answers, not a national inbox	verify — find the group's page/email
B4	Grace Church STL — runs Celebrate Recovery (confirmed in search)	verify — church contact page
B5	A second local CR group in a different part of the metro	verify
B6	St. Louis County recovery support coalition (health department recovery resources page)	form stlouiscountymo.gov recovery support page

Start with B3–B5 — the local group leader is the warmest door and answers fastest. B1 and B2 are the slow, wide ones.

SECTION C — JOBS / WORKPLACES (new category)

The angle: every large employer and union runs an Employee Assistance Program (EAP) — the confidential benefit that covers mental health and substance use. EAP coordinators are always looking for free, private, opt-in resources to list. Your app is exactly that, and "confidential, nobody at work sees anything" is the whole sales point.

The rule is the same as schools: free resource, opt-in, employee decides in private. Never mention money — the moment pricing enters, procurement enters.

What a "yes" looks like: one line in an EAP newsletter or benefits portal that reaches hundreds or thousands of employees. Not a contract.

C-master — use this body, change the first line

Subject: A free, private recovery resource for your EAP

Hi,

I'm a St. Louis app builder and this will be short.

I built a private recovery-and-wellbeing app called Turn Someday Into Day One — a day counter, SOS tools for the hard ten minutes, and 30-day programs across 13 tracks: alcohol, food, gambling, social media, anger and more.

Two things make it a fit for an EAP. First, it's completely private — nobody sees anyone's data, not us, not the employer, not a spouse. Second, it has a whole section for someone worried about a loved one — the second group in any workforce is bigger than anyone says out loud.

I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 I got free and built what I'd needed. The offer is simple: free to start, opt-in, nothing for your team to run. If you'd consider a mention in an EAP email or benefits portal, I'll write the blurb myself.

<https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One · St. Louis

The target list (6)

#	Target	Route
C1	A large St. Louis employer's HR/benefits contact (health system, utility, or manufacturer)	verify — HR/benefits page, ask for the EAP coordinator
C2	A St. Louis union local (building trades, teachers, nurses) — unions run member assistance programs	verify — local's contact page
C3	The EAP provider itself (ComPsych, Optum, Magellan, etc.) — ask about their resource directory	form — provider's partner/contact page
C4	A second large local employer in a different industry	verify
C5	A regional hospital system — staff wellness / EAP	form — staff wellness contact
C6	A school district EAP — note this doubles as a school touch, but through the benefits door	verify — benefits contact

Start with C1 and C2. The line to say on the phone: "Who coordinates your employee assistance or wellness program?" — that's a question receptionists route happily.

SECTION D — SCHOOLS (the pile is empty — one fresh batch)

The original 22 are all sent (SCHOOLS.md), and the follow-ups are already written as Gmail drafts. Here are three new out-of-state districts to keep the pipeline moving. Same body as the SCHOOLS.md master, same rule: never mention money.

#	District	Route
D1	Denver Public Schools	verify — hr@ or staff-wellness contact
D2	Chicago Public Schools	verify — employee wellness page

D3	Dallas ISD	verify — benefits/wellness contact
----	------------	------------------------------------

Body: reuse the Lindbergh email in SCHOOLS.md — change the district name in the first line and the subject. Nothing else changes; that email is the proven template.

SECTION E — REHABS (week 7, five new unsent)

The first 30 are out. These five are the next week's worth. Each references a category of article they run — confirm the specific article still exists before sending, then copy/paste.

E1 — The Recovery Village

- [] Not sent · form · <https://www.therecoveryvillage.com/> (contact)

Subject: Your recovery apps article — the category it's missing

Hi team,

I came across your recovery apps coverage. Across every list I've seen — yours included — not one app is built for the family. The wife watching it happen gets meetings and books, never software. Support groups for families have existed since 1951, and nobody ever built them an app.

I did. I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I built the thing I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One — day counter, SOS tools for the 2am moment, lessons across 13 habit tracks, and a whole section for the person who loves them. The core app is free.

If you're refreshing the article, I'd love for you to take a look: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One

E2 — Delphi Behavioral Health Group

- [] Not sent · form · find the corporate contact page

Subject: Your recovery apps article — the gap nobody's filled

Hi team,

I came across your recovery resources coverage. The category no list has yet: an app for the family. The wife watching it happen gets meetings and books, never software. Support groups for families have existed since 1951, and nobody ever built them an app.

I did. I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I built the thing I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One — day counter, SOS tools for the 2am moment, lessons across 13 habit tracks, and a whole section for the person who loves them. The core app is free.

For your next update, I'd love for you to take a look: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One

E3 — Vertava Health

- [] Not sent · form · <https://vertavahealth.com/> (contact)

Subject: Your recovery apps roundup — the gap nobody's filled

Hi team,

I came across your recovery apps roundup. Here's the gap none of these lists have filled: an app for the family. The wife watching it happen gets meetings and books, never software. Support groups for families have existed since 1951, and nobody ever built them an app.

I did. I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I built the thing I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One — day counter, SOS tools for the 2am moment, lessons across 13 habit tracks, and a whole section for the person who loves them. The core app is free.

If you're refreshing the list, I'd love for you to take a look: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One

E4 — FHE Health

• [] Not sent · form · <https://fherehab.com/> (contact)

Subject: Your sobriety apps article — the category it's missing

Hi team,

I came across your sobriety apps article. The missing category: an app for the family. The wife watching it happen gets meetings and books, never software. Support groups for families have existed since 1951, and nobody ever built them an app.

I did. I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I built the thing I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One — day counter, SOS tools for the 2am moment, lessons across 13 habit tracks, and a whole section for the person who loves them. The core app is free.

If you're refreshing the article, I'd love for you to take a look: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One

E5 — Oxford Treatment Center

• [] Not sent · form · <https://oxfordtreatment.com/> (contact)

Subject: Your recovery apps article — the gap nobody's filled

Hi team,

I came across your recovery apps article. The gap no list has filled: an app for the family. The wife watching it happen gets meetings and books, never software. Support groups for families have existed since 1951, and nobody ever built them an app.

I did. I was addicted for 38 years. At 50 it was do or die, and I built the thing I needed: Turn Someday Into Day One — day counter, SOS tools for the 2am moment, lessons across 13 habit tracks, and a whole section for the person who loves them. The core app is free.

If you're refreshing the article, I'd love for you to take a look: <https://www.turnsomedayintodayone.com>

Jacques Turn Someday Into Day One